The European Blue Forum Stakeholder Position Papers are out now!!

Our latest papers, crafted collaboratively by European Blue Forum members through insightful discussions over the past 10 months are now accessible through our website. These documents are set to serve as a significant statement on maritime and coastal stakeholders' common issues, challenges and future expectations for our European Seas. They gather the needs of the European Blue Forum members and provides the main axes of action for the years to come. The papers will be presented during a public meeting of the inter-parliamentary group SEARICA in Brussels on 7th March 2024.

European Ocean Days – Where Next for Europe's Seas?

The aim of this specific event, taking place in Brussels on 6th March 2024, is to contribute to Europe's reflections on what future priorities might be for Europe's Seas. Discussions would consider not only policy needs, but also the wider economic, technological and social transformations that are occurring within Europe and beyond. In essence, the question to be addressed is: What, in this wider, evolving future landscape, might be the pathways for Europe's Seas, with a perspective to 2050?

Dive into the European MSP Platform's new Multi-Use Compendium!

The European MSP Platform is shortly about to launch their new Multi-Use Compendium. This initiative is a response to the growing volume of discussions and interest on the topic of multi-use. It represents an evolution from the heavily used ‘Sectors and Conflicts’ Pages on the MSP Platform. Tailored for Member States’ Planners and MSP Practitioners, the compendium aims to consolidate information from diverse sources, offering a comprehensive view of the opportunities, challenges, and enablers associated with the integration of various maritime economic activities at sea. Look out for its launch later this month!

The EU Policy Lab is seeking your insights!

In April, the EU Policy Lab (Joint Research Centre, European Commission) will collect citizens’ and stakeholders’ real-life experiences in relation to water, in all its aspects. They will share a weblink with you and highly encourage you to participate in this 15-min innovative survey, via the European MSP Platform. This will help gather insights from all 27 member states and a variety of stakeholders on the way which water matters most to them. The text analysis of the stories will inform an awareness campaign by DG Environment and the policymakers of the next Commission more generally.
